PARIS STYLES

By DOROTHY CAREW

United Press Staff Correspondent
Paris, (U.P.)—Tailored handbags, as trim as the dark autumn street clothes with which they will be carried, are making their bow in Paris shops. Alligator is the newest of fabrics for the coming season, but rich calfskins have adopted a note of novelty which will mark them as being definitely autumn, 1937.

Alligator bags are seen principally in simple, rectangular designs with no trim other than an occasional tailored gold buckle. Calfskins, on the other hand, have discarded the severity of line and vary in style considerably.

One flat navy bag of rectangular design is modified with rounded corners at the top. Its clasp is a large gold globe with the continents and oceans etched on its surface.

Handles are buckled down like suitcase straps, dull gold links hold others in place, and strapless bags are trimmed with simple rolls of matching leather or are topped with metal frames of modern design.

Pouches are back in soft dull leather broader at the base than at the top. Fashioned with round or rectangular caps that fit over the opening of the bag, when it is opened the sides may be spread out so that the contents may be found easily.

Silky antelopes with severe gold and silver trim are the loveliest of afternoon bags. One with a broad matching handle is trimmed with short strips of alternating gold and silver at either side.

Woman, 100, Leads Thieves

Krems, Austria, (U.P.)—A 100-year-old Gypsy woman has been revealed as the brains of a gang of thieves. She succeeded in entering homes by the excuse of resting for a short time. Once inside, she drew plans of the house and turned them over to aid members of the gang in committing burglaries.

Hungary Aids Students

Budapest, (U.P.)—The Hungarian government is inaugurating plans to help white collar workers. A system of government loans is being organized to assist university students. Many of the unemployed are being placed on the staffs of official agencies for improving social conditions.

Mrs. Benton Honored

Mrs. Rebecca Harris, Mrs. Hughie Russell and Mrs. Eliza Cooper delightfully entertained at a miscellaneous shower Monday night at the home of Mrs. Harris in honor of Mrs. Alton Benton, who before her recent marriage was Miss Mildred Harris. The house was decorated in a profusion of summer flowers and potted plants, the color scheme of yellow and white being carried out. During the evening several games and contests were enjoyed by all. The guests were then invited in the dining room to cut the bride's cake, which caused much enjoyment. The hostesses served a delicious ice course.

"Don't tell me you wasn't hanging around the beer barrel all this time—you've got your belt out to the last notch."

Caroline Chatfield Says

It is as much a mother's duty to plan a pleasant social life for her daughter as it was to plan the child's education. Mother can go far in guiding girl to find suitable mate.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

Ever since I can remember I have been working and sacrificing to give my only child whatever she wanted, including a college education. At twenty-one she graduated and I thought from then on I would have somebody to look to. She has always been a devoted and obedient daughter, and never appeared to have the slightest interest in the boys. Now I have discovered that she is corresponding with a lazy, low bred farmer who is twice her age and hardly able to support himself much less a wife. She will probably marry him and my heart is broken over it. Evidently she hasn't appreciated anything I have done for her or she wouldn't have deceived me so cruelly. If you can give any comfort, please do it quickly.

ANSWER:

My dear woman, you have made the mistake that many mothers make, yet one for which they must all pay dearly in one way or another: you have thought of your child as belonging to you, body and soul, present and future. You have failed to take into account her natural desire for a life of her own quite apart from you. True, you have seen beyond the cradle to the college, sacrificed to give her an education so she could take care of herself and you; but you haven't seen beyond the college into the larger life which every girl wants and should have if there is any way to lay hands on it.

No doubt she deceived you because she didn't have the courage to tell you the truth; namely, that she wanted a husband and home of her own. No doubt her apparent lack of interest in the boys was due to the fact that she had been kept so close to you, the boys were scared off and to save her face she pretended that she didn't care whether or not they came.

Had you thought of your own youth, you must have remembered how you felt at age twenty-one. You were not less loving or less dutiful a daughter because you had beaux, married one of them and moved away from your parents' home. Then think before it is too late. Don't be hard on the girl, nor make her feel like an ingrate but rather try to get her point of view; sympathize with her and implore her not to rush into an unsuitable marriage before she has had a chance to meet young men of her own age, make friends with them and find among them a more promising partner for the long pull of matrimony.

Generally speaking, a mother has her choice: she may hold her daughter down, fend off the boy friends, fight the very thought of marriage; or she may connive with Mother Nature and go far toward guiding the girl to a suitable mate. Any woman who approaches this subject selfishly must be prepared to take the consequences; for youth must be served and it demands to be served with romance.

WHERE FASHION LEADS WE TRAIL LIKE SHEEP

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you please explain about the wearing of veils in the present day? Mother insists that they were never intended to be worn after dark and I can hardly believe she is right because why would so many of the hats bought for street wear have veils attached to them?

Answer: It is impossible to attempt to limit fashions. Perhaps women will wear veils around their wrists or around their necks next, for whatever fashion says to do we all, like so many sheep, follow after. Of course they didn't used to wear veils in the evening. Of course they didn't used to go without backs in their dresses either, nor did they play tennis in pinks! At present they do wear stiff little rue trimmings on the hats and call them veils, and also call some of the hats they grace evening hats. As for the larger circular evening veils that are dropped snugly over the hair to keep it in place, and then flare smartly at the bottom edge, which are illustrated in the fashion magazines, they are perhaps legitimate children of day before yesterday's "fascinator."

ANNOUNCING DEPARTURE

Dear Mrs. Post: My husband has long held a public office in this town and in consequence we have met many people whom we believe would be interested to know that we are going to make our home in a distant town. May I send our visiting cards to a long local list of names, writing P. P. C. on them, and could these cards include our future address rather than the present one, which we are giving up permanently?

Answer: Utility suggests that you might change the usual procedure of writing P. P. C. on cards which you are now using and instead write on those which carry your future address. However, unless you in some way make this clear people receiving them may not notice the change. As a suggestion, you might have this number of cards engraved with the name of the town on the line below the street address, and then on the cards which you have made up for other uses simply omit it, since visiting cards do not usually include any more than the street address.
